Poverty Exposed through the Camera Lens

Media are invited to celebrate the showcase of the 2010 Urban Exposure Photo Exhibit. Since January, 17 Calgarians in the 20 to 30 age range have experienced poverty in our city through the lens of their camera. They witnessed multiple issues that low-income Calgarians may face on a daily basis, while at the same time strived to identify and understand potential solutions.

Participants used photo journalism to craft their individual story, which captures the experiences they encountered on their journey.

The photos will be on display at the exhibit, and the participants will be on hand to discuss their own personal stories.
